STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Companies Act, 1956 has been in force for more than four decades. During this period the said Act has been amended several times to keep pace with the changing economy and circumstances. In the dynamic world of corporate affairs, there is a need to continuously liberalise, deregulate and simplify the laws governing the corporate sector. It is also necessary to provide adequate protection to investors, shareholders, creditors, employees and other concerned persons to ensure that corporate wrongs are quickly and effectively rectified and those responsible are punished, thereby bringing about good corporate governance.

2. Based on the recommendations of a working group comprising the experts having knowledge of law, economics and company affairs, a comprehensive Bill, namely the Companies Bill, 1997, was introduced in Rajya Sabha in 1997, to consolidate and amend the law relating to companies and certain other associations. The main objective of the said Bill was to facilitate a healthy growth of the Indian corporate sector under a liberalised, fast changing and highly competitive environment. Subsequently, some of the provisions contained in the Companies Bill, 1997, were enacted by the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1999 and the Companies (Amendment) Act, 2000.

3. Since certain provisions of the Companies Bill, 1997, have already been enacted and become part of the Companies Act, 1956, a new comprehensive legislation to consolidate and repeal the Companies Act, 1956, is neither feasible nor required. Several provisions of the Companies Bill, 1997, which have not been enacted so far are, however, relevant even today, and can be enacted with modifications. Therefore, the present Bill, inter alia, incorporates certain provisions of the Companies Bill, 1997 with or without modifications.

4. Further, based on the recommendations made by the Committee on Corporate Audit and Governance (the Naresh Chandra Committee), a number of provisions are proposed in the present Bill to facilitate good corporate governance which, inter alia, are as under:—

- (a) prohibition of business, financial, employment or personal relationships between the auditor and the company of which a person is an auditor;
- (b) prohibition of carrying out certain non-audit services;
- (c) provision for the appointment of independent directors and women directors in the Board of directors of the company;
- (d) provision for composition and independence of audit committees;
- (e) conferring power upon the Central Government to attach bank accounts if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 have been violated;
- (f) certification of documents by company secretaries in certain cases; and
- (g) conferring power upon the Central Government to order 'compliance audit' with regard to secretarial audits.

5. The Joint Parliamentary Committee (JPC), which examined the recent stock market 'scam', has made certain recommendations, some of which are as follows:—

- (i) provision for a cap on the number of investments any individual can float and there should be a minimum shareholding to prevent proliferation of shell companies;
- (ii) restrictions on inter-corporate loans in case the loan/deposit is to be made to a share-broking company;

(iii) preventing recurrence of vanishing companies and necessary identification of promoters/directors at the time of incorporation to be made mandatory.

6. The Bill also proposes to amend the Companies Act, 1956 to give effect to recommendations in the preceding paragraph.

7. Apart from the above, there is also a need to amend certain sections, (including sections 87, 119, 252 and 560) of the Companies Act, 1956 relating to voting rights, liability of trustees for the debenture holders, minimum number of directors and power of Registrar to strike a defunct company off the register so as to bring them in line with the present need of the corporate sector. The Bill, therefore, also contains provisions to amend the said sections.

8. In view of the above, it is proposed to withdraw the Companies Bill, 1997 pending in the Rajya Sabha.

9. The Bill seeks to achieve the above objects.
